SHADES OF TERROR

The Hindutva terror groups linked with a series of bomb blasts in Muslim shrines and other places in Rajasthan and Maharashtra have also killed Christian activists and targeted evangelistic work in the tribal belt of India.

Police investigators have traced the murder of Malwa Christian leader Pyar Singh Ninama to hit men of the terror gangs responsible for bombing the world famous Ajmer Sharif shrine.

According to news reports this morning (July 12) in the New Delhi edition of Mail Today and Rediff, the Malwa region in western Madhya Pradesh is a focal point and recruiting ground of this terror group which also has as its members retired and serving officers of the Indian Army, who may have sourced the explosives used by the group.

This is the first time official information has come about the network which so far was presumed to be working against Muslims alone.
